

CSR Institute's Code of Ethics

CSR Institute Members acknowledged and respect the following principles:

A. Principle of Integrity

CSR Institute is founded and acts as a non-profit, non-government, independent organization which has adopted a governance framework based on the following values:

- Contribution on theory and practice of social responsibility
- Education for society on social responsibility
- Excellence in quality of studies and activities
- Integrity
- Respect
- Truth
- Trust

The Principle of Integrity is non-negotiable.

B. Principle of Dignity

In every aspect of their activity, members of CSR Institute respect dignity, values, tradition, religion and culture of other members, beneficiaries, partners and clients.

C. Principle of Respect and Honesty

CSR Institute will accept only those donations which respect its mission, which do not contravene to the values and basic principles of the organization and those which do not limit organization capacity to respond at highest technical and scientific, freedom and objectivity standards.

CSR Institute will carry out the research activity in full respect of existing standards, personality and competence of its experts and it will act with honesty in the relationship with its beneficiaries

D. Principle of Transparency

CSR Institute will publish annual report according to existing standards and it will grant to its members the access to data and information, in accordance with the statute of the association.

E. Principle of Independence

CSR Institute will enter collaboration relationship with governmental, intergovernmental organization only with the aim to fulfill its planned objectives, without compromising independence and autonomy in organization governance.

CSR Institute will differentiate itself as a model of responsibility, neutrality and political equidistance.